It seems for years I've wandered, my head up in the clouds
From Jackson town I journeyed, a minstrel and a clown
How was I to know, what would come to be?
It took a lot of living to set my conscience free

I found love and lost it, I didn't understand
How a gift so pure and sacred could slip right through my hands
My tears fell in the dark, was it just a waste of heart
Or the innocence of reckless youth that tore my world apart

All that really matters, matters most of all
Time is only circumstance in life's curtain call
When all is said and done
We will all succumb
We're gone before you know it
So make it worth the race you run

I've tasted life's sweet freedom from a teeming well of passion
Wrestled with my demons as my dreams turned into ashes
Left to my demise, I've come to realize
It's give and take and fortitude, a dance of compromise

I've stared death in the face
As he took my friends from me
And questioned God's decision
Why they were the next to be
Guess there's no way to fool our fate
In the end we're all too late
So give it all you got
With love with empathy
